Management Information Systems (MIS)

The essence of MIS embraces the use of Information Systems Technology (IS/IT) to support the operation, management control, analysis and decisionmaking activities of an organisation. MIS is therefore a multi-disciplined subject concerning information technology and business management. The course consists of lectures and case studies. Topics cover: (1) Components and different types of an MIS; (2) Functional use of MIS; (3) MIS as a competitive strategy; (4) MIS planning and development; (5) Information System Management

No hands-on practice on PC will be provided.
